

Emergency Response Refresher Training

Training emergency responders is what our company does best! We offer incident command, hazardous material technician level, operations level and awareness level refresher training.

Technician level training is provided in a basic 24-hour and advanced 40-hour format. This training is geared toward responding to a release for the purpose of mitigating the incident. Incident command strategies, hazard assessment, understanding of tactical operations and entry procedures are conveyed in an interactive hands-on format.

All of our courses include at least 80% hands-on training – the best way to help ensure that participants are going to retain and be able to use the information they receive during training. Our training sessions include a variety of formats based on what the client needs for on-going training. We then take the information, pull it together in an energized training format, and provide it to the participants.

The key to on-going, annual refresher training is to be able to build on each year's training. We help companies do this by looking at what topics were covered in the past and what expectations they have for the future. Understanding these objectives helps the team maintain competency and encourages new innovative training sessions.

We are not locked into the same old thing each year. We enjoy working hard to make your training class the best.
